ECONtribute LawEcon Workshop

Yotam Kaplan, Bar-Ilan University, Israel

“The macroeconomic theory of contractual excuse doctrine ”

With Yehonatan Givati and Yair Listokin

In person:

Juridicum, RSI room n° 0.017

BGSE Workshop

Kailin Chen, University of Bonn

“Information Aggregation and Transmission in Informal Voting”

Abstract:

I consider an informal voting model where the conflict of interests still exists even if the unknown state is revealed. I show that information aggregation always fails and provide sufficient and necessary condition for information transmission in large elections.

In person:

Juridicum, RSI room n° 0.017

CANCELLED: MEF-Seminar (Macro/ Econometrics/ Finance)

Pawel Doligalski, University of Bristol

“Redistribution with Performance Pay”

Finance/ CRC/ ECONtribute Seminar

Agnese Leonello, ECB

“Central Bank Digital Currency and Financial Fragility”

Abstract:

How does the introduction of a remunerated Central Bank Digital Currency (CBDC) affect financial stability? To study this issue, we introduce CBDC in a model in which a bank attracts deposits and is subject to runs, whose probability is endogenously pinned down via global-games methods. We first validate a commonly held view that higher CBDC remuneration increases the withdrawal incentives of investors and thus bank fragility. Second, we identify a contrarian force: the bank raises deposit rates in response to higher CBDC remuneration to retain deposits that, in turn, reduces fragility. These opposing effects can lead to a U-shaped relation between CBDC remuneration and bank fragility. Finally, we examine CBDC holding limits and their impact on fragility, deposit rates, and optimal CBDC remuneration.

„Prosociality and competition: Evidence from a long-run field experiment“

With Ranjita Rajan and Michela Tincani

Abstract:

We present results from the first study to examine the causal impact of enduring competition on the development of prosociality. Inspired by the literature on tournaments within firms, which shows that competitive compensation schemes reduce cooperation in the short-run, we explore if prolonged exposure to a competitive environment attenuates the formation of prosociality. Based on a large-scale and long-run intervention in the education context, we find lower levels of prosociality for students who experienced a 2-year competition period. An implication of our results is that policies intended to support disadvantaged children can have (unintended) side-effects on socio-emotional skills.

" Endogenous Information Acquisition in Cheap-Talk Games "

Abstract:

This paper deals with costly information acquisition and transmission in environments where a sender can communicate with a decision-maker about some state of nature through cheap-talk. I establish a version of the recommendation lemma, meaning that the sender generally reveals all acquired information to the decision-maker in optimal equilibria. Furthermore, I characterize properties of optimal experiments under posterior-separable cost structures. Complementary to the literature on Bayesian persuasion, I find that any cheap-talk problem is solved by some bi-pooling policy in settings where the agents' preferences depend on the expected state only. For the uniform-quadratic case, I explicitly characterize the best bi-pooling policies. The main qualitative result is that monotone partitions are not generically optimal.

„Soft Negotiators or Modest Builders? Why Women Earn Lower Real Estate Returns“

With Laurent Bach, Paolo Sodini, & the MiDA Team

Abstract:

Using repeat-sales data on apartments in Sweden, we estimate the gender gap in housing returns. We confirm that single women's returns gross of renovations are lower than single men's, especially over short holding periods. Adding administrative data on renovation expenses and traders' background, we find that women undertake fewer renovations and have less construction-related experience than men. The gender gap declines by more than 80% once this heterogeneity is accounted for, and it is nonexistent where no renovations are reported. We find no evidence supporting alternative explanations of the gap, such as women's unwillingness to negotiate or higher risk aversion.

ECONtribute Podcast Special #Ukraine

Tom Zimmermann, ECONtribute, University of Cologne
„Die Inflationsspirale“

Abstract:

Befördert der Krieg die Inflation? Stehen wir kurz vor einer neuen Eurokrise? Und was kann die Europäische Zentralbank tun, um das Preisniveau zu stabilisieren? Tom Zimmermann, Professor bei ECONtribute an der Universität zu Köln, forscht unter anderem zu Finanzmarktstabilität und Geldpolitik. Wir sprechen darüber, wie Inflation überhaupt entsteht und gemessen wird, wie sich die Teuerungsrate ohne den Ukraine-Krieg entwickelt hätte und warum die EZB in einem Dilemma steckt. In dieser Folge geht es um Preise, Geldpolitik und Zinsen.
