| Lernziele | The course enables students to apply game theory and microeconomic results from incentive theory to organizational problems which arise from the division of labour within and between different hierarchical layers. The students will learn that the foundation of organizations can be both a solution to incentive problems and, at the same time, a source for new ones. | | | | | |
| Inhalte | Starting from the fundamental trade-off between incentives and risk sharing, the course presents theoretical models on static and dynamic incentives in organizations. Incentive problems are analyzed which arise from asymmetric information or the impossibility of writing complete contracts. According to the nature of the incentive problem at hand, solutions and their practical implementation in organizations are discussed. | | | | | |
