

Research Module in Management and Applied Microeconomics

332123050/MA ECON RM MAM

Content and learning outcomes

Content	Cooperation and incentive problems are at the heart of many economic situations: for example, a group's joint outcome is highest if group members cooperate, but individual payoff maximization leads to free-riding and cooperation failures. The module will focus on theoretical models as well as empirical results of cooperation and incentive issues in different areas (e.g., in public economics, personnel economics and industrial organization). For example, light will be shed on the provision of public goods, the interaction of employees at the workplace and the collusion of firms.
Learning outcomes	After completion of a project module students should: be familiar with the basics of scientific methods relevant for the topic of the project module, be able to do a literature search, read and document scientific articles in Economics, be capable of defining research topics, formulating specific research questions in Economics and developing a research approach to investigate, be acquainted with academic research methods relevant for investigating the project's topic, be able to document, present and defend in class the results of their research.
